

Glenlude

JOHN MUIR TRUST

Exploring Glenlude

Glenlude is around 10 miles south of Peebles in the Scottish Borders - well within two hours travel from Glasgow, Edinburgh and the north of England. The site is on the edge of the Southern Uplands with the Southern Upland Way passing close by.

The variety of habitats, central location and facilities at Glenlude support a range of engagement and educational activity. In addition to regular conservation work parties, many groups from social inclusion, corporate and academic backgrounds make great use of its potential for outdoor learning, raising awareness and helping wild places thrive.

The map on this leaflet is for illustrative purposes only and is not intended for navigation.

johnmuirtrust.org